MOTOR THROUGH ORCHARD BELT

Bendersville Bank Supplies Ice Cream to Growers and their Guests. Hand out Peaches. Lunch at Noon.

Through Adams County's famous apple belt—the model fruit section of Pennsylvania—the orchardists of this county, together with railroad and newspaper men from abroad, motored to-day on the annual inspection trip, taken a short time prior to the harvesting of the great annual crop.

The tour was made along the route as originally outlined except that it started with an inspection of the Musselman Canning Company plant at Gardners, instead of concluding with a visit to the plant of the company at Biglerville. After this establishment had been visited the sixteen motor cars carrying seventy five passengers whisked over the morning itinerary as published in The Times earlier in the week.

As orchard after orchard was reached the owners had fine peaches handed out to all in the cars and every one was greeted most cordially. It was a veritable get-together tour for the local growers and a most hospitable form of entertainment for the special guests.

Noteworthy was the enterprise of the Bendersville National Bank which was ready to serve all of the motorists with ice cream and it is needless to say that they all availed themselves of the generous gift and that they appreciated it greatly after having been on the road for several hours under a hot summer sky.

About noon the party pulled up at the "Mapleton" orchard and there Tyson Brothers furnished a most appetizing luncheon, which was eaten out-of-doors and a delicious picnic meal was thoroughly enjoyed.

As soon as it was finished the tour through the orchard belt over the second part of the route was taken up and the cars again started away among more fine orchards, past more perfectly kept buildings, and over excellent roads.

E. D. Hillary, division freight agent of the Philadelphia and Reading, and George C. Shenton, representing the Gettysburg and Harrisburg Railroad, were impressed with the fine condition of the orchards and much pleased with the outlook for a large crop. All the orchards passed were in absolutely first class condition, many of the trees laden with the fruit so that their branches hung far down to the ground, and everything pointed to 1916 as a great year for Adams County fruit.

Equally as much impressed as the railroad men were representatives from various newspapers among whom were John P. Guyer of the Harrisburg "Patriot", and Ralph F. Schraedley of the Harrisburg "Telegraph". Though well acquainted with the fame of Adams County fruit they were surprised at the extent of the orchards and the beautiful condition of the properties. Robert Walter, of Hummelstown, an extensive orchardist of that section was also with the tour and expressed himself as delighted.

It was a complete success—this annual tour for 1916—and voted not only a fine thing from a business standpoint but a delightful social event.

The railroad men, by these tours, are kept constantly in touch with the needs of the growers for the proper shipping of their fruit, in the line of cars and trackage—and the knowledge which they get in this way is sure to be reflected in the service given as soon as the crop is ready to be moved.

GETTYSBURG FOR 1917 ASSEMBLY

Selection of Place Given to Committee with Every Prospect of Local Choice.

The members of the Lutheran Summer Assembly, at their business meeting on Wednesday afternoon, re-elected the officers who have served for several years: president, Rev. S. W. Herman, Harrisburg; vice presidents, Dr. J. A. Singmaster and Dr. W. A. Granville, Gettysburg; secretary, Rev. George N. Lauffer, Steelton; treasurer, Rev. John H. Meyer, Jersey City. Suitable expressions of appreciation were made for the work of those addressing the assembly and conducting the various classes. The matter of the place for holding next year's meeting was left in the hands of the executive committee but it is understood that Gettysburg will again be chosen.

The constantly increasing enrollment here is taken as an indication of the favorable manner in which this town is looked upon, and the times spent at the Seminary, the admirable accommodations both in the dormitories and at the refectory, and everything else, it is believed, will cause Gettysburg to be chosen once more for the meeting in 1917.

The subject of Dr. Parsons' lecture at the Assembly this evening will be "Color Photography." It will be illustrated.

DROWNED IN RIVER

Young Man Meets Death in Susquehanna River.

Harry Brandt Zimmerman, formerly of Mont Alto, met death by drowning Tuesday in the Susquehanna river near Milton. He was aged 24 years and 20 days.

Mr. Zimmerman was born in Mont Alto. At the age of seven years his parents moved to Waynesboro where he resided with them for about fifteen years. Two years ago last June he went to Milton, where for a short period he was employed in one of the manufacturing plants of that town. At the time of his death he had been employed as a motorman on the Milton electric car line.

ESCAPED BEING BADLY CRUSHED

Lucky Catch of Arm over Single Tree Likely Saved Gettysburg Man from Death.

John K. McIlhenny is confined to his home on East Middle street as the result of a thrilling experience he underwent this week when he narrowly escaped death under a load of heavy stone.

Mr. McIlhenny was driving the horses in a wagon and was sitting on one of the larger stones as the wagon was descending a hill. Suddenly the stone rolled forward and he was thrown out. As he fell his arm dropped over the single tree and he hung there for some moments until the line wrapped about the wheel and stopped the horses.

Mr. McIlhenny was just about exhausted and says that he could not have held on much longer. His legs were hanging immediately in front of the wheels and, had he dropped, the heavily loaded wagon would have passed over him. When the wagon stopped he climbed out to a place of safety, unhurt but suffering from nervous shock on account of his experience.

QUICKLY HALTED MARKET PRACTICE

No Buying in Wholesale Quantities if Officer Can Prevent it. No Boosting of Prices either. Thursday Market.

Arrest is threatened by Market Master Smiley for infraction of the provision of the market ordinance which prohibits the purchasing of anything on the curb with the intention of re-selling. It is said that this has been attempted a number of times recently, and this morning it was repeated. The offender attempting the practice to-day was from Maryland, according to Mr. Smiley.

Huckleberries were much in demand, and when a wagon with a fine supply came along, the Marylander promptly offered to buy the entire lot with the evident intention of re-selling. The market master was on the job, however, and instructed the stall holder to supply the demand to Gettysburg patrons who were waiting for the berries. Mr. Smiley informed the trucker that he could dispose of what he had left to the Marylander after the regular buyers had been supplied.

The would-be wholesale purchaser, thereupon, left and the berry man started to sell at nine cents a quart. Soon the visitor returned and told him to boost his price to ten cents, as that was the figure charged elsewhere on the market. Mr. Smiley again interfered and the troublesome man left. It is said that he visits other towns and communities to get his supplies of berries. Further attempts to do this on the Gettysburg curb market will be met with prompt action.

Section 11 of the market ordinance covers the price raising matter and the re-selling proposition when it prohibits any one "to persuade any person or persons to enhance the price of any provision, meat, poultry, eggs, or other article, when there (at the market) or within the borough limits, or for any person or persons to purchase any marketable commodity in or at said market spaces during market hours, for the purpose of re-selling the same on that day."

The same action also covers the taking out of the county for purposes of re-selling anything bought here at market when it says: "Nor shall any person or persons purchase, in this borough, on any market day, within or about said market spaces, with intention of re-selling the same out of the county, with view of supplying any other market or person abroad any provision, meat, poultry, eggs, fruit, vegetables, or anything bought for sale, under a penalty of five dollars for the first offense, and ten dollars for every subsequent offense."

The market was a good one, thirty two wagons being on hand. Berries were in general demand. Sweet corn was again much sought and not enough was offered to supply all who wished it. About seven o'clock a trucker brought in a spring wagon filled with corn and in five minutes he had it all sold. He had intended peddling it about town after market hours but Mr. Smiley persuaded the man to rent a stall and he was surprised and delighted with the resulting success.

GET ONLY HALF THE ICE ASKED

Company Supplying its Customers with Fifty Per Cent of Regular Amounts.

The Gettysburg Ice and Storage Company this morning started serving their customers with just one half the amount of ice they have been accustomed to receive.

Those who had been getting fifty pounds a morning were reduced to twenty five pounds; others from thirty to fifteen, and so on all along the line. It is believed that, if everything continues to go all right at the plant, the factory will be able to resume full supplies on Monday, catching up over Sunday when there are no deliveries.

It was feared that some of the county fruit shippers would be in a predicament on account of not being able to get ice here for their refrigerator cars, but these shippers find that the railroads are supposed to furnish the ice if necessary and they plan to fall back on the companies for this service.

This morning Waynesboro called for assistance here but it had to be refused. It was stated that their supply was practically exhausted in spite of the fact that their storage plant holds fifteen or eighteen tons.

C. B. Dougherty, manager of the local plant, tried on Wednesday to get ice from Lancaster and Hagerstown but at both places they reported the same condition as that prevailing here.

Annual Visitor to County Town is Sorely Afflicted.

Mrs. W. W. Wolf, of Baltimore, who had been spending her summer months at New Oxford for a number of years, was stricken blind at her home. She had been preparing to come to New Oxford for the summer, when she lost the sight of one of her eyes, and in a few days, the loss of the other eye followed. Mrs. Wolf was taken to the Presbyterian Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, Baltimore, and was operated upon. By request of Mrs. Wolf, her nurse wrote to Mrs. G. F. Grove, of New Oxford; but at the time of writing she did not know whether the operation was a success or not.

The wound is now responding to treatment.

BOOZE PARTIES ON BATTLEFIELD

One Reason for Making Motor Trucks Have Licensed Guide or Driver. Guides Called to Commission Office.

That many of the parties who come here in automobile trucks for tours of the battlefield bring along a supply of liquor, and that this was one reason for the recent ruling requiring such parties either to employ a licensed guide or driver, was intimated at the office of the National Park Commission this morning when a number of the local guides appeared in answer to a summons.

It is stated that whiskey and beer bottles have been found on the field after such parties have visited it and the guides were given their instructions on how to deal with such situations. They were instructed to find out before taking these parties on the avenues whether or not they had such refreshments along, so that some tab might be kept and further offenses prevented.

It is further stated, however, that drivers of trucks may get one-day permits by applying at the office of the commission and that they may then go over the field without guides or drivers, this permit being in effect a drivers' license to the persons receiving it. This, too, will serve the same purpose of holding one person liable for any offenses that may be committed by the passengers or the party as a whole.

The recent ruling of the commission has raised a storm of arguments on both sides. Many claim that it will serve to keep away pleasure parties from nearby towns who come here with no desire of hearing the story of the battle for the reason that they have frequently visited the place before.

Others see in the ruling a measure to benefit the local guides and to protect livymen who can find no reason why they should be licensed if visiting people who haul for hire may make the battlefield trip without such license.

If the news is circulated among the truck owners in nearby towns that the permits may be secured for the asking, the ruling should not interfere with traffic from that source.

BIG PICNIC

ODD CASE OF BLOOD POISON

Believe that Bites of Forest Insects may be Cause of Serious Condition.

Arthur Leib, aged about 35 years, a well known man residing northwest of East Berlin, is in a critical condition from blood poisoning. The exact cause for the trouble is not definitely known.

Mr. Leib had been in the mountain for berries, recently, and a day of two afterward small lumps, resembling hives, made their appearance on parts of his body. These have terminated in ulcers all over his body and limbs, and have finally affected the brain.

Whether the poison was the result of the bite of a copperhead snake, or whether what are known as small "scaticks" had imbedded themselves in the skin, and the scratching of the same by the finger nails caused the trouble, has not been determined.

PLAGUE SPREADS IN PHILADELPHIA

Two Deaths and Eight New Cases Reported.

TOTALS ARE 117 AND 29

Physicians See Now That Malady Is Not Bred in Unclean Surroundings Only.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—As infantile paralysis swept on yesterday, health department officials redoubled their efforts to trace the disease that is claiming such a toll of children to some definite source.

Eight new cases and two additional deaths, bringing the total to 117 stricken and twenty-nine fatalities, was the report issued at city hall.

The malady again made its way into a fashionable section of the city, attacking Edward Minor Fenton, Jr., son of the president of the Fenton Label company, 3011 Upsal street. An increase of cases in such districts goes a long way to prove, physicians believe, that the germ does not thrive in filth alone. The little Fenton child was taken to the hospital immediately.

What is believed to be the first case from direct contact was unearthed in West Washington lane, in the person of Benjamin Haylar, a brother of Esther Haylar, of 123 West Washington lane, who fell a victim to the disease sometime ago. Physicians declare his infection is due to coming into direct contact with his sister.

Since the disease first made its appearance in startling numbers—June 1—every theory relative to the origin of the germ advanced by some of the most prominent physicians in the country, virtually has been proved wrong. Until the germ attacked little ones in the neighborhoods that lay in suburban districts, it was believed it thrived only in the slums or thickly congested districts.

At a meeting of the school medical inspection corps, means of fighting the malady, should it continue to spread until the schools open, were discussed.

Great numbers of persons again sought certificates of health in their pleas to leave town. Mothers wishing to hurry their little ones to shore and mountain resorts to escape danger went to physicians, got certificates and then applied at the city hall for the only certificates that would be recognized by quarantine officers.

The quarantine was extended to all vessels coming from affected areas when it was brought to the attention of state health officials that wealthy New Yorkers and residents of New Jersey were using yachts to smuggle children into Pennsylvania and the mountain resorts in the west. Hereafter every vessel will have to submit to an examination if they come from New York or New Jersey, and children without certificates found aboard will be hurried out of the state.

SIX KILLED, 17 HURT IN ZEPPELIN RAIDS

German Airships Shell Coasts of England and Scotland.

London, Aug. 10.—German airships raided the east coast of England and the southeast coast of Scotland.

Three children, two women and a man were killed, according to the latest report which was issued by the war office. Seventeen men, women and children were injured. One hundred high explosive bombs and sixty incendiary bombs were dropped on many coastal towns. The war office says the Germans' object apparently was to inflict indiscriminate damage.

The text of the official statement issued said:

"A hostile airship crossed the east coast of England. Another airship visited the southeast coast of Scotland. The raiders did not penetrate far inland, but dropped a number of bombs in various localities near the coast."

"At several places the airships were engaged by anti-aircraft guns and driven off from their objectives. Reports received up to the present show that three women and one child were killed and fourteen persons injured. No damage of military importance is reported."

From seven to ten Zeppelins took part in the raid, according to the official statement issued. About 160 bombs were dropped and twenty-three casualties were caused, says this statement, supplementing the earlier announcement.

GORZ CAPTURED BY ITALIANS

Success Crowns Final Drive Begun on Sunday.

10,000 PRISONERS TAKEN

Key to Trieste Seized in Greatest Achievement of Cardona's Campaign Against Austrians.

Rome, Aug. 10.—The Italians have captured Gorz.

Official announcement of this victory, the greatest won by the Italians since the war against Austria-Hungary was begun, was made by the war office. The Italians made 10,000 prisoners.

The fall of Gorz, which was the key stone of the Austro-Hungarian front along the Isonzo river, means the opening of the road to Trieste for lieutenant General Count Codorna's army.

Not only will the defense of the great Austrian seaport be practically impossible hereafter, according to military experts, but the naval stronghold of Pola will be menaced.

When the Italians entered Gorz they found it a pile of ruins, for hundreds of thousands of shells of all calibers had been hurled into it.

The Austrian stronghold was bravely defended by General Svezoyar Boerovic, one of the foremost generals on the Austrian staff, and a big army, but they could not withstand the terrific pressure that marked the drive by the Italians.

In fierce fighting in the last two days Cardona's men captured Conte Sabotino, north of Gorz, and Monte San Michele, on the Carso plateau, lying to the south. This gave them control of the bridgehead, one of the most important of the Austrian defenses along the Isonzo, the capture of which was announced.

The Milan Secolo contains the following account of the offensive from its war correspondents, Signori Pao Alessi and Raffaele Garbini:

"At seven o'clock Sunday morning, under an unclouded summer sky, the huge orchestra of Italian guns began rending the air with a terrifying chorus all the way from Plava heights right down to Monfalcone, supported thence by a naval demonstration in the higher Adriatic against the enemy's coast between Duino and Miramare."

"The whole territory which had been plowed up by bombardments since July 14 was again subjected to a ceaseless hail of shells of every calibre for the space of nine hours. No such awe-inspiring cascade of fire ever before has been witnessed on the Italian front. So terrific were the incessant earthquake-like phenomena thereby produced that houses in the Gorz plain were shattered or collapsed by the force of the seismic waves, while the mouths of vast caverns on the Carso, in which thousands of Austrian troops had hurried and crouched for refuge, were damaged and choked by tons of debris so as to become converted into living tombs."

"Only at four o'clock in the afternoon was the order given for the infantry to quit the trenches where they had passed so many months in pent-up impatience. Thousands of their front ranks wore round their helmets a floral garland specially woven and forwarded for the historic occasion by women of Trieste and Schio, of Vorstizza and Vicenza."

"To the stirring cry of 'Great Italy forever!' they bounded across the dunes at the bridgehead of Gorz and lower down scaled the lines of Carso plateau, everywhere to engage in a hand-to-hand struggle with the foe. Ahead of the main masses went men bearing aloft big white discs mounted on slender gray-green painted poles so as to guide the gunners in lengthening the range as the great advance proceeded."

LIGHTNING FIRES MINE

Twelve Known Dead When Bolt Causes Explosion.

Michel, B. C., Aug. 10.—Twelve men are known to be dead and several are missing as a result of an explosion in No. 3 mine.

Lightning which struck surface wires conducting power into the mine caused the explosion, it is believed. The explosion was a fusch force that all the buildings were destroyed and the large maintenance cribbing as well. Fire started in one place in the mine, but apparently has been extinguished. One body has been recovered.

THIAUMONT AGAIN IN GERMAN HANDS

The Teutons Make Powerful Counter Attacks.

London, Aug. 10.—The shell-wrecked and blood-soaked Thiaumont work northeast of Verdun has again changed hands—the sixth time within the past 120 hours.

By a series of powerful assaults after a violent cannonade, the Germans succeeded in penetrating the work and holding it. This admission was made in the official statement of the Paris war office. The French hold the outskirts of the work. In the village of Fleury the French made some progress.

The Germans simultaneously launched two strong offensive movements during the night, one on the Somme front and the other at Verdun. North of the river Somme, says the official statement, the German assaults were concentrated around Hem, and all were repulsed except at one point where the Teutons stormed a first line trench. The French immediately delivered a counter blow and the Germans were partially ejected.

The Germans also succeeded in penetrating an advanced position of the allies on the Lihons-Chaulnes railroad, but they were immediately thrown out at the point of the bayonet.

A further advance by the British on the Somme north of Pozieres was announced by the war office.

RUSSIANS PRESS ON

Take Another Position in Advance South of Dniester.

Petrograd, Aug. 10.—Announcement was made by the war office that the Russians have occupied Tysmenitsa in Galicia on the river Vorone.

The czar's troops, advancing northward in Galicia along the Kolomea railroad, are within six miles of the great Austro-Hungarian base at Stanislaw.

The Austro-Hungarian and German forces that fell back from the Tiumach-Ottynia line are making a severe effort to hold the city, and have delivered counter attacks, but all of these broke down.

(The Vorone is one of four minor streams that separated the Russians who reported making a fifteen-mile tract in the Austro-German lines south of the Dniester from Stanislaw. Stanislaw is seventy-five miles southeast of Lemberg.)

On August 7, General Letchitzky's army took 7400 prisoners, including 3500 Germans, and sixty-three machine guns.

EXPLOSION IN CELLAR

Lad Loses Eye When Lighted Match Sets Off Chemicals.

West Chester, Pa., Aug. 10.—Hunting for something in the cellar of drug store of William A. Pierce, Harold Biddle, a young colored boy in the employ of Pierce, looked into an apparently empty chemical barrel with the aid of a lighted match, when a terrific explosion followed that destroyed the sight of the lad's eye, damaged a quantity of merchandise in bottles stored in the cellar and shook the neighboring buildings.

The basement was speedily in flames and the boy ran from the store with his clothing ablaze, but his coat was pulled from him and the flames extinguished. The entire fire department was called into service.

The drug store is opposite the opera house where the "Birth of a Nation" was being played before a crowded house, but cool headed men prevented a panic in the playhouse, and the fire in the store was extinguished after considerable damage resulted.

CLIMB UP INTO FIFTH POSITION

One Point Alone Separates Ponies from Humblest Station in the League. Bat out Victory over Champs.

For the second time this season the Ponies are enjoying the light of day. After taking a lively game from Frederick Wednesday afternoon, they scampered out of the basement and cavorted about in the open once again. The Champs marched into the place made vacant by the Plankites' exodus and now hold the humble station by the narrow margin of one point.

After threatening Hucker Taylor for five innings and failing to score through poor work on the bases, the Gettysburgians finally started the real punishment in the sixth with Frederick two runs to the good. Koehler was passed and took third on Stein's hit, scoring on an infield hit of Oyler to second.

Another bit of trouble was furnished the Carroll County boy in the seventh when Sherman was safe on Maurer's error, took second on one of Bigler's three perfect sacrifices, and scored, after Boyne had been passed, when Koehler put a Texas Leaguer back of third that Winslow, Barnhart, and Maurer tried desperately but in vain to reach. In both these innings two men were left on base. Herman taking three strikes in the sixth, and Stein grounding out in the seventh.

But the light punishment which resulted in tying the score was nothing to compare with the grand bombardment in the eighth.

Plank was first up and was given a bit of free transportation. Hart, the new pitcher, was put in to run for him and showed real speed when he took third on Oyler's bunt. Muff was safe at first when Agnew dropped the throw and immediately afterward stole second. Herman hit a long double to deep left and both scored. Sherman's hit scored, Herman, and Cooney took second on another of the famous Bigler sacrifices. Durboraw hit over second and Agnew and Maurer proceeded to play for a double only to discover that there was no runner coming from first, Sherman taking third and Durboraw stealing second. Both scored on Koehler's hit.

Frederick's scoring was done in the third and sixth. With two out in the former inning, Sherman hit Taylor on the head, Orison, running for him, took third on Agnew's single and scored on Morrison's. Barnhart grounded for the third out. In the sixth Meyers and Orison hit safely and Texas scored when Oyler fumbled Maurer's boulder. Hartline forced Maurer, Orison taking third but Winslow grounded out.

Taylor pitched fine ball in the opening innings. His feat in the second was specially worth while. He opened it by fanning Stein and then, after passing Plank and giving Oyler a double, he fanned Herman and Sherman.

Sherman, pitching for the Ponies, was consistent throughout and gave an excellent exhibition.

TEN INNING TIE

League Leaders in Thrilling Battle on the Maroons' Field.

With the score 2-1 in favor of Martinsburg in the tenth inning of Wednesday's game at Chambersburg, Pownall stole home as Morris came in to catch him off third. The peg to Johnson was perfect but Umpire Raphael called the runner safe. The game almost ended in a riot for Chambersburg fans rushed on the field when several Martinsburg players objected to the decision a bit strenuously. The Maroons were unable to bring over a winning tally though two were on after Pownall scored, and darkness ended the battle.

Managers Have Until Today to Answer Demands.

HOPE FOR ARBITRATION

Members of U. S. Mediation Board Go to New York to Offer Their Services.

New York, Aug. 9.—With the announcement of an overwhelming vote cast by the engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen in favor of a strike unless the 227 railroad systems accede to their demands for an eight-hour day and time and a half pay overtime, the heads of the four railroad brotherhoods put the matter of a settlement of disputes up to the railroad managers.

Official announcement of the referendum vote, which has been taken over a period of six months, was made at the joint session of brotherhood representatives and railroad managers, in the auditorium of the Engineering Society's building.

"It's up to you," said A. B. Garretson, chief of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors and spokesman for the union men, to Elisha Lee, chairman of the conference committee of railroad managers, after the vote was announced.

And as the last phase of the fight which may result in a strike tying up the rail systems of the country and paralyzing traffic was begun.

Only federal arbitration can prevent the strike if the railroads do not grant the men's demands. There is a possibility of federal arbitration, but the brotherhood heads would not discuss it.

From Washington word came this upon suggestion of President Wilson. Martin A. Knapp, chairman of the United States board of mediation and conciliation, Commissioner William L. Chambers and G. W. W. Hanger, assistant commissioner, have started for New York to be ready to accept an invitation from the roads and the men in the controversy between the railroad systems and their employees to mediate their differences.

The railroad managers gave no definite answer to the renewed demands of the men and it was agreed to adjourn until today to give the managers time for further discussion. A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, notified the managers that the time for parleying was over unless the roads were prepared to present a modified proposition.

"If you are ready to prepare a modified proposition," said Mr. Garretson, "We are ready to discuss it."

The managers objected to the inclusion in the figures of the vote on roads not represented in the conference, but were informed by the union heads that the four brotherhoods were fighting for every railroad employee throughout the country as a matter of principle. They insisted on including these figures.

The managers also asked if the vote by individual railroads would be shown, but in reply to this, the brotherhood chiefs said that if the roads were willing to make public the returns on the vote taken some time ago by the roads themselves among their employees, the union would furnish their figures gladly.

SAYS 5C LOAF IS WASTE

Declares Small Size Bread Cannot Be Made Nutritious.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 9.—A five-cent loaf of bread is an economic waste, in the opinion of C. N. Power, of Public, Col., who addressed the convention of the master bakers of the United States. He discussed the "Ten-cent Loaf and Why."

Efficiency, declared Mr. Power, demanded the baking of ten-cent loaves rather than the five-cent size. He estimated the cost of baking 1000 loaves of bread of the five-cent size is $3.55 more than the cost of baking the same flour into 500 ten-cent loaves.

"The overhead charges cannot be justified," continued Mr. Power. "A baker should regard himself as an agent of the people who use bread with the sacred responsibility of providing them with the most direct and most efficient bread it is possible to make. This cannot be accomplished with a five-cent loaf."

Explosive in Pocket Blows Up Man
Kansas City, Aug. 9.—An unidentified white man was blown to pieces here in a crowded city park when either dynamite or nitro-glycerine he believed to have been concealed in his pocket exploded. Police authorities declared they were unable to tell how the explosive might have been set off and are investigating. Parts of the man's body were blown fifty yards. Forty or fifty persons within a short radius were uninjured. One man who sat on the same bench was scarcely bruised.

Gen. David Gregg is Dead.
Reading, Pa., Aug. 9.—General David McMurtrie Gregg, eighty-three years old, the last of the Union officers holding the rank of general at the battle of Gettysburg, died at his home here after an illness of several months. He was in good health up to late last spring.

RHUBARB CHUTNEY.—Two pounds of rhubarb cut in pieces, three-fourths pound of seeded raisins, one-half pound of stoned dates, chop, soak raisins and dates three hours in two and one-half cups of vinegar, add sugar (one and one-half pounds), one ounce each of minced chili peppers, salt, ginger, garlic and one-fourth or one-half teaspoonful of cayenne. Cook slowly. When raisins are soft add rhubarb. Cook until thick. Sultana raisins can be used and almonds (one cupful, minced) added.

Cream of Peanut Soup.—Materials: Two cupfuls rice stock, two cupfuls milk, one-half cupful peanut butter, one tablespoonful cornstarch, one teaspoonful salt, one cupful croutons.

Utensils: Mixing bowl, saucepan, tablespoon, teaspoon, cup.

Directions: Mix the peanut butter and hot rice stock together until smooth. Add to the boiling milk and cornstarch (which has been wet with cold water), salt and boil ten minutes. Serve with bread croutons.

A Caviar Ritual.—Quite new and quite popular already is an appetizer made from the egglets of selected herrings. This delightful tidbit closely rivals caviar because lighter in color and, listen—cheaper! With the addition of lemon and spread very thinly on bread it makes tasty sandwiches. A sprinkle of oil on the top of a tomato stuffed with salad adds a clever tang.

Cheese Croquettes.—Make a sauce of three level tablespoonfuls of butter, one-third cupful of flour, two-thirds cupful of milk. Add three egg yolks, one-half cupful grated parmesan cheese, one cupful of any desired cheese broken into bits and season with salt and cayenne. When cold shape, roll in egg and breadcrumbs and fry in deep fat.

Not a Matter of Money.
One's worldly possessions seem to have very little to do in the matter of determining one's happiness, and we verily believe that we get just as much pleasure and satisfaction out of life in the old days of our poverty, when we used to give our wife a carpet sweeper for Christmas, as we do now, when we give her half a dozen salad forks.—Ohio State Journal.

THE SEA WOLF

BY JACK LONDON

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Humphrey Van Weyden, critic and dilettante, is thrown into the water by the sinking of a ferryboat in a fog in San Francisco bay, and becomes unconscious before help reaches him.

CHAPTER II.—On coming to his senses he finds himself aboard the sealing schooner Ghost, Captain Wolf Larsen, bound to Japan waters, witnesses the death of the first mate and hears the captain curse the dead man for presuming to die at the beginning of the voyage.

CHAPTER III.—The captain refuses to put Humphrey ashore and makes him cabin boy "for the good of his soul." Humphrey sees the lady of the mate dumped into the sea.

CHAPTER IV.—He begins to learn potato peeling and dish washing under the cockney cook, Mugridge, is caught by a heavy sea slung over the quarter as he is carrying tea aft and his knee is seriously hurt, but no one pays any attention to his injury.

CHAPTER V.—Humphrey's quarters are shared by a sailor who steals his money and accuses him of it. Wolf Larsen kicks him for throwing ashoreboard to window. Later he listens to Wolf Larsen's "The year; a ferment... the big eat the little..."

CHAPTER VI.—Cooky is jealous of Humphrey and hates him. Wolf has a sermon and makes it the basis for another philosophic discussion with Humphrey.

CHAPTER VII.—Wolf entertains Mugridge in his cabin, wins from him at cards the money he stole from Humphrey, and then tells him it is his, Wolf's, by right of might.

CHAPTER VIII.—Cooky and Humphrey what knives at each other.

CHAPTER IX.—Humphrey's intimacy with Wolf increases, and Wolf sketches the story of his life to Humphrey.

CHAPTER X.—Wolf discusses the Bible and Omar with Humphrey and illustrates the instinctive love of life by choking Humphrey nearly to death.

CHAPTER XI.—A carnival of brutality breaks loose in the small boats. A young woman and four men, survivors of a steamer wreck, are rescued from a small boat.

CHAPTER XII.—Wolf is knocked overboard at night, comes back aboard by the lifeline and wins clear in a fight in the fore-cabin.

CHAPTER XIII.—Hump dresses Wolf's wounds and, despite his protest, is made mate on the hell-ship.

CHAPTER XIV.—Mr. Van Weyden tries to learn his duties as mate. Wolf hates the men who tried to kill him.

CHAPTER XV.—Van Weyden proves by his conduct in a blow, with all hands out in the boats, that he is a man, that he has learned "to stand on his own legs."

CHAPTER XVI.—Two men desert the vessel in the small boats. A young woman and four men, survivors of a steamer wreck, are rescued from a small boat.

CHAPTER XVII.—The deserters are picked up in the small boats. A young woman and four men, survivors of a steamer wreck, are rescued from a small boat.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Before Maude Brewster, the rescued girl, Wolf taunts Van Weyden with his former useless life. He attempts to taunt Maude also, but she tells him she earns $1500 a year as a writer and she and Van Weyden find they know each other's work. They talk together of a world alien to Wolf.

CHAPTER XIX.—Maude sees Mugridge towed overboard in a bowl to give him a bath and his foot bitten off by a shark as he is hauled aboard. She begins to realize her danger at the hands of Wolf.

CHAPTER XX.—Van Weyden realizes that he loves Maude. Wolf's brother, Death Larsen, comes on the sealing grounds in the steam sealer Macedonia and blankets Wolf's boat, so stealing his catch.

CHAPTER XXI.—Death Larsen "hoes" the sea again and Wolf captures one of his boats with its men. The boat of the Ghost fight with some of the Macedonia's and capture them.

CHAPTER XXII.—The Ghost runs away from the Macedonia in a fog. Wolf furnishes liquor to the prisoners and all hands and the Macedonia's men agree to work for him.

CHAPTER XXIII.

I awoke, oppressed by a mysterious sensation. There seemed something missing in my environment. But the mystery and oppressiveness vanished after the first few seconds of waking, when I identified the missing something as the wind. When I had dressed and opened the door, I heard the waves still lapping on the beach, gurglingly attesting the fury of the night. I had slept late, and I stepped outside with sudden energy, bent upon making up lost time as befitting a dweller on Endeavor Island.

And when outside, I stopped short. I believed my eyes without question, and yet I was for the moment stunned by what they disclosed to me. There, on the beach, not fifty feet away, bow on, dismasted, was a black-hulled vessel. Masts and booms, tangled with shrouds, sheets, and rent canvas, were rubbing gently alongside. I could have rubbed my eyes as I looked. There was the home-made galley we had built, the familiar break of the poop, the low yacht-cabin scarcely rising above the rail. It was the Ghost.

It came upon me suddenly, a strange, that nothing moved aboard. Wearied from the night of struggle and wreck, all hands were yet asleep. Maude and I might yet escape. I would call her and start. My hand was lifted at her door to knock, when I recoiled at the smallness of the island. We could never leave ourselves up.

There was nothing for us but the wide raw ocean. I thought of our snug little huts, our supplies of meat and oil and moss and firewood, and I knew that we could never survive the wintry sea and the great storms which were to come.

And then, in a flash, the better suggestion came to me. All hands were asleep. Why not creep aboard the Ghost—well I knew the way to Wolf Larsen's bunk—and kill him in his sleep? After that—well, we would see. But with him dead there was time and space in which to prepare to do other things; and besides, whatever new situation arose, it could not Possibly be worse than the present one.

My knife was at my hip. I returned to my hut for the shotgun, made sure it was loaded, and went down to the Ghost. With some difficulty, and at the expense of a wetting to the waist, I climbed aboard. The fore-cabin scuttle was open. I paused to listen for the breathing of the men, but there was no breathing. I cautiously descended the ladder. The place had the empty and musty feel and smell usual to a dwelling no longer inhabited. Everywhere was a thick litter of the worthless fore-cabin dunnage of a long voyage. I noted that the boats were missing. The steerage told the same tale as the fore-cabin. The hunters had packed their belongings with similar haste. The Ghost was deserted.

The reaction from my fear, and the knowledge that the terrible deed I had come to do was no longer necessary, made me boyish and eager. I sprang up the break of the poop, and saw—Wolf Larsen. What of my impetus and the stunning surprise, I clattered three or four steps along the deck before I could stop myself. He was standing in the companionway, only his head and shoulders visible, staring straight at me. His arms were resting on the half-open slide. He made no movement whatever—simply stood there, staring at me.

I began to tremble. The old stomach sickness clutched me. I put one hand on the edge of the house to steady myself. My lips seemed suddenly dry and I moistened them against the need of speech. Nor did I for an instant take my eyes off him. Neither of us spoke. There was something ominous in his silence, his immobility. All my old fear of him returned and by new fear was increased a hundred fold. And still we stood, the pair of us, staring at each other.

I was aware of the demand for action, and my old helplessness strong upon me, I was waiting for him to take the initiative. Then, as the moments went by, it was at last impressed upon me that I was there, not to have Wolf Larsen take the initiative, but to take it myself.

I cocked both barrels and leveled the shotgun at him. Had he moved, attempted to drop down the companionway, I knew I would have shot him. But he stood motionless and staring as before. And as I faced him, with leveled gun shaking in my hands, I had time to note the worn and haggard appearance of his face. It was as if some strong anxiety had wasted it. The cheeks were sunken, and there was a weary, puckered expression on the brow. And it seemed to me that his eyes were strange, not only the expression, the physical seeming, as though optic nerves and supporting muscles had suffered strain and slightly twisted eyeballs.

All this I saw, and my brain now working rapidly, I thought a thousand thoughts, and yet I could pull the triggers. I lowered the gun, stepped to the corner of the cabin, and started to relieve myself.

"I am," I said, "definitely to be alone at this length. There is no one for me, no rest, no peace, no change, no hope, no love, no friendship, no anything, but only myself and my gun."

I stood there, looking down at my gun, and my fingers strove to pull the trigger. I was so close to the trigger, I could feel the trigger. I was so close to the trigger, I could feel the trigger.

"I am," I said, "definitely to be alone at this length. There is no one for me, no rest, no peace, no change, no hope, no love, no friendship, no anything, but only myself and my gun."

"I am," I said, "definitely to be alone at this length. There is no one for me, no rest, no peace, no change, no hope, no love, no friendship, no anything, but only myself and my gun."

"I know," I said, "definitely to be alone at this length. There is no one for me, no rest, no peace, no change, no hope, no love, no friendship, no anything, but only myself and my gun."

He stepped out of the companionway and came up to me.

"Put down that gun. I want to ask you some questions. I haven't had a chance to look around yet. What place is this? How is the Ghost lying? How did you get here?"

A Peep at Wolf Larsen Showed Me That He Had Not Moved.

Where's Maude?—I beg your pardon, Miss Brewster—or should I say, Mrs. Van Weyden?"

I had backed away from him, almost weeping at my inability to shoot him, but not fool enough to put down the gun. I hoped, desperately, that he might commit some hostile act, attempt to strike me or choke me; for in such way only I knew I could be stirred to shoot.

"This is Endeavor Island," I said. "Never heard of it," he broke in.

"At least, that's our name for it," I amended.

"Our?" he queried. "Who's our?"

"Miss Brewster and myself. And the Ghost is lying, as you can see for yourself, bow on to the beach."

"There are seals here," he said. "They woke me up with their barking, or I'd be sleeping yet. I heard them when I drove in last night. They were the first warning that I was on a lee shore. It's a rookery, the kind of a thing I've hunted for years. Thanks to my brother Death, I've lighted on a fortune. It's a mint. What's its bearings?"

"Haven't the least idea," I said. "But you ought to know quite closely. What were your last observations?"

He smiled inscrutably, but did not answer.

"Well, where's all hands?" I asked. "How does it come that you are alone?"

I was prepared for him again to set aside my question, and was surprised at the readiness of his reply.

"My brother got me inside forty-eight hours, and through no fault of mine. Boarded me in the night with only the watch on deck. Hunters went back on me. He gave them a bigger reward than I offered it. Did it at before me. Of course the crew ate me the go-by. That was to be expected. All hands went over the side, and there I was, marooned on my own vessel. It was Death's turn, and 'ts all in the family anyway.'"

"I know did you lose the masts?" I asked.

"Walk over and examine those landyards," he said, pointing to where the mizen rigging should have been.

"They have been cut with a knife," I exclaimed.

"Not quite," he laughed. "It was a neater job. Look again."

I looked. The landyards had been almost severed, with just enough left to hold the shrouds till some one's strain should be put upon them.

"Cooky did that," he laughed again. "I know, though I didn't spot 'im at it. Kind of evened up the score a bit."

"Good for Mugridge!" I cried.

"Yes, that's what I thought when everything went over the side. Only I said it on the other side of my mouth."

"But what were you doing while all this was going on?" I asked.

"My best, you may be sure, which wasn't much under the circumstances."

I turned to re-examine Thomas Mugridge's work.

"I guess I'll sit down and take the sunshine," I heard Wolf Larsen saying.

There was a hint, just a slight hint, of physical feebleness in his voice, and it was so strange that I looked quickly at him. His hand was sweeping nervously across his face, as though he were brushing away cobwebs. I was puzzled. The whole thing was so un... a Wolf Larsen I had known.

"How are your sea-sicknesses?" I asked. "They still trouble me," was his answer. "I think I have one coming on now."

He slipped down from his sitting posture till he lay on the deck. Then he rolled over on his side, his head resting on the biceps of the under arm, the forearm shielding his eyes from the sun. I stood regarding him wonderingly.

"Now's your chance, Hump," he said.

"I don't understand," I lied, for I thoroughly understood.

"Oh, nothing," he added softly, as if he were drowning; "only you've got me where you want me."

"No, I haven't," I retorted; "for I want you a few thousand miles away from here."

He chuckled, and thereafter spoke no more. He did not stir as I passed by him and went down into the cabin. I lifted the trap in the floor, but for some moments gazed dubiously into the darkness of the lazaretto beneath. I hesitated to descend. What if his lying down were a ruse? Pretty, indeed, to be caught there like a rat. I crept softly up the companionway and peeped at him. He was lying as I had left him. Again I went below; but before I dropped into the lazaretto I took the precaution of casting down the door in advance. At least there would be no lid to the trap. But it was all needless. I regained the cabin with a store of jams, sea-biscuits, canned meats, and such things—all I could carry—and replaced the trap door.

A peep at Wolf Larsen showed me that he had not moved. A bright thought struck me. I stole into his state room and possessed myself of his revolvers. There were no other weapons, though I thoroughly ransacked the three remaining state-rooms. To make sure, I returned and went through the steerage and fore-cabin, and in the galley gathered up all the sharp meat and vegetable knives. Then I bethought me of the great yachtman's knife he always carried, and I came to him and spoke to him, first softly, then loudly. He did not move. I bent over and took it from his pocket. I breathed more freely. He had no arms with which to attack me from a distance; while I, armed, could always forestall him should he attempt to grapple me with his terrible gorilla arms.

Filling a coffee pot and frying pan with part of my plunder, and taking some chinaware from the cabin pantry, I left Wolf Larsen lying in the sun and went ashore.

Maude was still asleep. I blew up the embers (we had not yet arranged a winter kitchen) and quite feverishly cooked the breakfast. Toward the end, I heard her moving about within the hut, making her toilet. Just as all was ready and the coffee poured, the door opened and she came forth.

"It's not fair of you," was her greeting. "You are usurping one of my prerogatives. You know you agreed that the cooking should be mine, and—"

"But just this once," I pleaded.

"If you promise not to do it again," she smiled. "Unless, of course, you have grown tired of my poor efforts."

To my delight she never once looked toward the beach, and I maintained the banter with such success that all unconsciously she sipped coffee from the china cup, ate fried evaporated potatoes, and spread marmalade on her biscuit—she could not resist. I saw the surprise that came over her. She had discovered the china plate from which she was eating. She looked over the breakfast, noting detail after detail. Then she looked at me, and her face turned slowly toward the beach.

"Humphrey!" she cried. "The old unnamable terror mounted into her eyes."

"Is he—?" she quavered. "I nodded my head."

BIG RAILROAD STRIKE AVERTED

Both Sides Agree to U. S. Mediation.

DEMANDS WERE REFUSED

Brotherhoods Accept Offer of Federal Board, Brought in at Request of Managers.

New York, Aug. 10.—The threatened strike of the 400,000 railway employees of the United States was averted when the railroad brotherhoods accepted a proffer of the United States board of mediation and conciliation to mediate their differences with the railroads.

Announcement of the acceptance of the offer was made by A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, after it had been delivered by G. W. W. Hanger, a member of the board, following an appeal to that body to intervene made earlier in the day by the National Conference of Railway Managers.

Mr. Garretson said he had informed the board that the offer was accepted on the condition that "its good offices are promptly exercised."

The federal board, which is composed of Mr. Hanger, Martin A. Knapp and Judge W. L. Chambers, was prepared to begin conferences with the respective sides to the controversy.

The procedure of the federal board is to meet each side separately, learn their attitude and attempt to obtain concessions from each as a basis on which a settlement can be reached when they are again brought together.

"The federal board of mediation and conciliation has notified us," read Mr. Garretson's statement, "that it has received the request of the managers' conference committee to exercise its friendly offices in an effort to bring about an amicable settlement of the questions that exist between the conference committee of the managers and ourselves. Our answer was to the effect that we would accept the mediators' proffer of their friendly offices provided it was promptly exercised."

The national conference of railroad managers had rejected the men's demands. They proposed that they be mediated by the federal tribunal. The brotherhoods refusing to join in an appeal to the tribunal, the railroads made an individual appeal. The federal board then offered its services to the brotherhoods.

Mr. Garretson, reiterating the contention of the brotherhoods that in previous attempts to settle differences with the railroads through the federal boards the brotherhoods had failed to obtain satisfactory awards, said that the unions believed they could reach a settlement by dealing directly with the roads.

Mr. Garretson explained to newspapermen that the unions had not declined mediation unequivocally, but had refused to join with the railroads in asking for it, because they did not believe in it at this time. The conductors' chief, together with his colleague, Warren S. Stone, reiterated that their position was that they had not yet exhausted all the possibilities by dealing directly with the railroad managers.

FLOOD SWEEPS W. VA. VALLEY

$1,000,000 Damage Reported—Tracks Undermined.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 10.—Property loss exceeding $1,000,000 was caused by a cloudburst that swept down Cabin Creek valley, according to reports received here.

Efforts to get into communication with the stricken district were unavailing. Just as a connection was made with the telephone operator at Eekdale, she shouted into the telephone:

"I can't stay here to talk to you; I've got to leave right away."

Reports were received that at least 100 persons had lost their lives, but any confirmation was lacking.

Chesapeake and Ohio railroad officials were unable to learn the fate of their trains in this district when the last wire went down.

Six bridges on the railway are reported to have been washed out, and in some places the tracks are said to have been swept away from the right of way. The Kanawha and Michigan and other roads in the valley also suffered heavily.

FIND OLD NEWSPAPERS IN COLONIAL BUILDING

Imbedded in Columns of College Dormitory.

Newark, Del., Aug. 10.—Newspapers nearly one hundred years old and containing items of unusual interest were found by Dean E. Laurence Smith nailed inside one of the four large colonial columns that have just been removed from in front of the old dormitory building to make room for a $125,000 new structure that is to be erected on the site.

These papers were published in Boston and Wilmington in 1833. The college building was erected that year and the institution was first opened on May 12, 1833. The papers found were as follows: Two issues of the Wilmington, Gazette and Watchman of June 8 and August 10, 1833; Boston Investigator, of March 8; Boston Daily Globe, of April 1; Boston Trumpet and Universalist Magazine, August 10, and the New England Palladium, of June 4 and May 31, all 1833.

One of the Boston papers contains General Andrew Jackson's inaugural address, when he assumed the presidency for a second term. Another speaks of Daniel Webster, being a candidate to succeed General Jackson.

There were shark scares then the same as now as one paper contains the account of a large white shark biting off a young woman's leg.

The First Cradle.

The earliest mention in literature of cradles is in the Biblical account of Moses' little ark of bulrushes. But there are in the British museum some clay tablets found some years ago on the site of ancient Nineveh which, according to archaeologists, make it quite clear that somewhere about 4,000 years before the Christian era there was another infant hero exposed in a little ark of bulrushes. Thus the cradle that was found by Pharaoh's daughter 1400 B. C. was comparatively modern.

It is certain that cradles were first used as a means of protecting babies from the attacks of wild animals by suspending them from the boughs of trees.—London Globe.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

What Every Youngster Needs.

Having grown to a better understanding of good taste, modern mothers are adopting more practical play clothes for their offspring. The rompers shown here are made of percale trimmed with gingham.

Children's clothes are adorable nowadays, even when they are designed for the most practical purposes. There never was a season perhaps where such uniformly good taste was displayed in youngsters' garments as this year, for mothers have gradually grown to a better understanding of good taste in such matters and fewer offences are committed in the name of fashion.

The rompers shown here require 1½ yards of 36-inch percale to make for a child of two years. The front and back of the bloomers are cut in one with the front of the waist and the rompers close at the sides. While the illustration shows a high neck with a turn-down collar of plain percale, this may be modified to either a V-shape or a square line. The elbow sleeves are finished with band cuffs, or the sleeves may be made full length, if desired. They are cut in one piece.

The home dressmaker who would cut the bloomers properly must study the various sections of the pattern and the methods of their arrangement as shown in the accompanying cutting guide. It will be noted that the section marked "A" containing waist front and front and back of bloomers, is placed on a lengthwise fold of the percale. Next to this come the belts, one for the front and one for the back of the rompers.

Along the upper row are arranged, all on a lengthwise thread, the back, sleeveband, waistband, collar and sleeve. The second waistband is laid along the fold of percale to the right of the belts.

For the square or V-shaped neck, cut out neck edges of front and back along indicating small "o" perforations. The small "o" perforations in the sleeve show how it may be shortened. All changes in length should be made in the pattern before it is placed on the material to avoid waste of goods.

Gingham in plain color makes the most practical trimming for the rompers.

The August Clearance Sale Embraces Every Character of Summer Goods

left from a great season's buying and selling. Great buying mostly to save price advances which have since taken place—Great selling because all goods were marked on just the legitimate profits on the lower cost. All stocks as large as ours must of necessity have much left over each season—which cannot be carried over or stocks would soon be clogged—So as has always been our policy we will have an

End of Season Sale

This Sale is larger than usual because stocks are larger—Prices are lower because there is more necessity to clean decks. We cannot mention any items here for the reason that many of the lots are small and may soon be sold out, but we ask you to come to us for any item of Summer wearing apparel—either made up or the material for same—AND EXPECT A REDUCED PRICE from our former low prices, and with it our usual

MYRTLE, THE MANICURIST..... VITAGRAPH

Millionaires don't grow on trees, but Myrtle, the manicurist, drew one in her nail clipping emporium, and found a young fortune in her palm after he had gone. But she also finds that there are other men also looking for fortunes, but did not find it out until she becomes engaged to a man and seals the pact with a diamond purchased at a 5 and 10 cent store. This picture is acted in three parts.

TERRY'S TEA PARTY..... VITAGRAPH

The count doesn't get the kind of welcome he expected when he calls. No indeed, he never expects to be met at the foot of the stairs by a keg of beer, but that's what happened. The cast includes Kate Price and Hughey Mack.
